

NOTED NOVELIST IS CALLED SUDDENLY;
NATION IS SHOCKED

Creator Of "Sherlock Holmes" Known As Spiritualist

LONDON, July 7.—Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, noted novelist and spiritualist, and creator of the world-famed "Sherlock Holmes," died here today at the age of 71 years.

News of Sir Arthur's death came as a definite shock to the country. He had been in fair health during the last few months, although a year ago he was forced to take a journey to South Africa because of his general condition.

Sir Arthur's death resulted from a heart attack. It was the generally weakening condition of his heart which necessitated the trip abroad in an effort to revive his failing health, and although no great improvement had been shown within the past few months, his death was unexpected.

The death of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle removes from the horizon one of the most colorful figures in English life, as well as one of the most famous. No English writer has a more reasonable opinion of Rudyard Kipling, was better known or more widely read, and although during the last few years he has definitely turned from writing and spent his entire time in the study and propagation of spiritualism, he still remained, and probably always will remain known to the world as the creator of Sherlock Holmes, a genius in the art of scientific deduction and detective without peer.

Sir Arthur was born in Edinburgh on May 22, 1859. He studied for medicine, and his learning in this science cropped up continually in the fantastic adventures of his fiction detective. He preferred to be a fiction writer for many years before giving himself over to fiction writing, but together with his unfillable place in English letters he combined such varied enterprises as exploration, travel and politics.

His travels included trips into the Arctic regions and to the west coast of Africa at a time when the latter truth, the "dark continent," virtually untouched save by the most hardy adventurers.

Sir Arthur's first important literary work was the world-famous "Study in Scarlet," in which he introduced to an admiring public the colorful characters of Sherlock Holmes and the ubiquitous Dr. Watson.

This volume was published in 1887. Others followed in quick succession, Doyle alternating his masterpieces of crime fiction with half-raising stories of adventure. The year 1888 saw publication of "Meh Clarke," the same year "The Captain of the Polestar" was issued. In 1889 he wrote his famous collection of detective stories under the title of "The Sign of the Four," and in 1891 came further doings of Sherlock Holmes in the volume "The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes."

Plays, novels, novelettes, short stories, essays, treatises and articles flowed from his pen, Sir A.

VIVIAN DUNCAN IS NURSING BLACK EYE

"He socked me plenty," the blonde Miss Duncan, slightly the worse for wear, told Justice of the Peace Webster at Malibu today when she demanded Lease's arrest.

XENIA POLICEMEN MAY ATTEND POLICE SCHOOL AT CAMP PERRY

In order that they may receive instruction in the varied subjects which make up an adequate field of training course for the modern police officer—care and handling of revolvers, sub-machine guns, riot runs, tear gas, smoke bombs and jiu-jitsu—Police Chief O. H. Cornwell hopes that it will be possible for several members of the Xenia police force to enroll in the police school at Camp Perry, O., this summer.

The period of training lasts for one week from August 24 to August 30 and the school is a highly specialized branch of the National Small Arms Firing School conducted annually under the authority of congress. The primary purpose of the school is to train those in attendance that they may return to their departments at home and act as fully qualified instructors in the various subjects covered at Camp Perry.

The instructors at the police school, Chief Cornwell says, are officers of the regular army, specialists in pistol shooting, disarming, chemical warfare, etc. Expenses of these instructors are borne by the war department and the National Rifle Association. Police officers in attendance at the school are comfortably quartered in floored tents. They are furnished with cots and blankets and there is no charge for either instruction or living quarters.

The only expense attached to the trip is for meals, for which the average cost is $1.20 a day, and for transportation to and from Camp Perry. The railroads extend special fare privileges which greatly reduce the cost of rail transportation.

The subjects included in the course are: revolver and pistol shooting, including safe handling of all firearms; quick draw from the holster; moving and disappearing targets; how grenades and bombs are made, safe handling and storage; use against criminals; protection against bombs when used by criminals; various "bone-breaking" and nerve-paralyzing holds, blows to disarm prisoners and defense against similar tactics by criminals; machine and riot guns, including assembly and disassembly and proper firing methods.

The police officers in school have a special hogan which they have dubbed "Hogan's Alley." At the windows, from beyond the chimneys and out of doors of the artificial shacks composing Hogan's alley, the head and shoulders of full-sized figures of men suddenly appear and the officer, without knowledge where his target will be, must draw his gun from the holster and fire six shots in a space of fifteen seconds before the target jumps back out of sight.

There are running-man targets, too, as well as disappearing targets at unknown distances and unknown kinds of conditions and situations which a police officer may be expected to meet have been reproduced for their instruction and training at Camp Perry.

Expenses of the officers are defrayed in several ways, according to the police chief; by appropriation by the city from regular funds; by special appropriation granted when the advisability of sending officers to the school has been pointed out to city commis-

MURDER, SUICIDE PROBED BY POLICE

CINCINNATI, O., July 7.—Mrs. Verdora Herbert, 38, mother of two children, who was found shot to death with James Bailey, 23, both of New Richmond, in an automobile on a lonely road, off the main highway, by Saul Henderson, a farmer, today was believed to have been a victim of murder and her companion a suicide.

Mrs. Herbert was shot through the neck and Bailey had a bullet wound in his head. The revolver was found on the floor of the car near his body. It was learned that Mrs. Herbert had been estranged from her husband for several months.

Bailey apparently shot the woman and then turned the weapon on himself, Coroner Dr. Joseph Curll said. They had been dead since Friday night, he said.

BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

SPIRITUAL BLESSINGS—Blessed be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, who hath blessed us with all spiritual blessings in heavenly places in Christ.—Eph. 1:3.

DISAPPEARANCE OF IDLENESS

In former years a large part of the young people used to spend their vacations in idle ways. If their parents did not actually need money, they usually loafed. They had jolly times with their tennis and camping excursions and other things, but they usually became terribly bored, and the summer seemed long and dull.

Today it has become customary for almost all young folks to work through the summer. Even if their parents are wealthy, they are quite likely to seek occupation. It seems tedious to them now, unless there is some special reason, to loaf around pleasure resorts.

So we see a great army of young workers at hotels, camps, in stores, etc. They are happier than they would be to loaf. They make some blunders on their jobs, but they throw themselves into their first money earning enterprises with an enthusiasm that many older workers do not display. Give them a chance to show what they can do.

THE NUMBER OF UNEMPLOYED

Government figures for about one fourth the population of this country, show the number of unemployed people to be 574,647, or about two per cent of the population. If these figures should continue in the same proportion for the whole country, the number of unemployed would be about 2,300,000.

It is unfair to draw any conclusions about the number of people out of work until these statistics are somewhere near complete. But these figures may suggest that the business pessimists have exaggerated the number of idle persons. There are always some who take counsel of their fears and see the worst side.

There should be some system for collecting more regular and accurate information about the number of idle people, yet it is a subject or which it is almost impossible to get strictly accurate figures. Some persons would consider a man unemployed if he was out of work for a month or a fortnight. And yet a man who has work for most or even half the year, and who will be called back whenever business starts up, can't be considered wholly unemployed, though he may be having a very hard time.

If we can keep all but two per cent of our people working regularly, the business system can't be called a failure, though it should do its best to find jobs for those two per cent.

The country wants the exact facts about unemployment, without political bias or attempt to gain political advantage. There are always some people too optimistic, who see golden prospects ahead, no matter how feverish and unhealthy business conditions are. And there are always the croakers, who raise a tremendous howl if people are laid off for a short time. Both over-optimism and pessimism obstruct the clear and accurate view on which regular industry is based.

The WAY of the WORLD

By GROVE PATTERSON

MORE THINGS THAN ONE

Richard Barthe, young colored man of Chicago, is becoming a famous sculptor. He started out to paint. He was even disappointed, after work in an art school, when he found himself a better sculptor than painter. Don't think there is only one thing you can do well and that your life is going to be a failure if you can't find just the thing you want. A normal boy can learn to do many things and do them well. So can a normal man. There are hundreds of good lawyers who might have been successful teachers of mathematics. There are preachers who would have made excellent business executives. Human nature is not so restricted, nor is human ability. Seniors coming out of college worry because they can't make up their minds what they want to do. It is not cause for worry. There are many things to do. All of them can be done well. It's a matter of application.

MEN FREED WOMEN

The history of women is partly a history of slavery. For centuries men kept women in subjection. Women did the heavy work. They were treated almost as beasts of burden. And curiously enough it is man that freed women, relieved her of part of her drudgery, provided her with leisure and a chance to go out in the world and do a man's work. How did he do all this? According to Grace Morrison Poole, officer of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, there was a time "when women kept within the confines of the four walls of her home, washed clothes, darned socks, swept floors and tended to the immediate needs of her family."

"Then man's inventive genius freed woman from those four walls; he perfected methods of lightening home work, and with her new freedom the first thing woman did was to form culture clubs. She started to sweep and dust cities as well as homes, and became interested in community life. Gradually her interest increased until now she manifests a vital interest in international affairs."

WITH THIS FREEDOM

What a great thing it would be if women, somehow, with this new freedom, could teach men a new lesson of vision, of imagination, of idealism. They seem to prefer, however, to use their freedom very much as men do.

LONG-WINDED

The trouble with some public speakers is that they do not read their audiences closely enough to detect the difference between real interest and a decent courtesy.

OBSERVATION

A proverb says "observation is the most enduring of the pleasures of life." And one might add that the human being is the most interesting study.

THE QUESTION BOX

CENTRAL PRESS
WASHINGTON BUREAU

Answers to questions of information and fact can be obtained by writing to Central Press Bureau, P. O. Box 126, Washington, D. C. and enclosing a self-addressed, stamped envelope. No answers will be given to marital, medical or legal questions.

Who are the present members of the U. S. supreme court?

Charles Evans Hughes now is chief justice of the supreme court and Oliver Wendell Holmes, William Van Devanter, James Clark McReynolds, Louis Brandeis, George Sutherland, Pierce Butler, Owen J. Roberts and Harlan F. Stone are the associate justices. Owen J. Roberts recently was appointed to replace Edward Terry Sanford, who died.

Journey's End

How was the name "Journey's End" chosen for the play with that title?

R. C. Sherriff, author, while searching for a title, was reminded of a dugout on the western front on the walls of which had been scratched "Journey's End." He decided that this was the title for which he had been groping and adopted it.

Baseball Rules

If another league wishes to buy a baseball player, can the club which has bought him services sell him if it wishes?

The manager of the club to which the player belongs must secure a waiver from each club in his league. Then if no club in the league wants the player he can make a deal with the outside club.

Ring Millions

What were the greatest gates received in boxing?

There have been five more-than-a-million dollar gates in boxing. The first was the Dempsey-Carpenter fight in 1921, which drew a gate of $1,626,580; the second was the Dempsey-Pirgo go, in 1923, having a gate of $1,188,822. The first Tunney-Dempsey fight, in 1926, took in a good $1,880,000. Dempsey and Sharkey, in 1927, had a gate of $1,083,529, and the last Tunney-Dempsey fight was the greatest in point of receipts of them all, having total receipts of $2,658,660, of which Tunney received $900,000, and Dempsey $450,000, record purses for principals in a ring bout.

Caviar

What is caviar, and how is it served?

It usually is the roe of sturgeon, salted, and has a strong flavor. The best caviar comes from Russia, and is sometimes the roe of other large fish. It is marketed in cans, and served as an appetizer, ice cold, with lemon wedges, a dish of grated onion and one of toast points or fingers.

A Newspaper's Contents

How many words are there in the average 24-page newspaper?

There are approximately 80,000 to 100,000 words in a paper of that size.

(NOTE: The following pamphlets may be obtained by sending 10 cents in coin and a large stamped, self-addressed envelope for each, to Central Press Bureau, P. O. Box 126, Washington, D. ## Peter's Adventures

By Mrs. Florence Smith Vincent

WIND HUFFS AND PUFFS

"You're a very wise fly, aren't you?" Peter flattered Mrs. Fly, and Mrs. Fly like it.

"Folks say I am," buzzed she, "and I hope you'll not think I am conceited if I say I guess I know about everything. Was there something you wanted me to tell you?" Peter nodded.

"Uh huh! I would like to know what those knobs half hidden behind your wings are for, and why you have two wings less than most of the flyers!"

"I own as many wings as ever did any gnat or mosquito," buzzed Mrs. Fly, and for all some flyers have more wings than have I, I get along quite as well as any of them. My knobs, as you call them, make up for any lack of pinions. Watch me balance myself, boy!" Mrs. Fly flew up to light on the curling tendril of a fern leaf. "I can stay on this shakily thing as long as I like, even the strongest wind would have a hard time blowing me off; my good old knobs hold me steady. Wind may huff and puff, but I stick on. Of course some rough creature could knock me down, but not if I saw him coming! My knobs are my balancers, and they help me to skim the air—hold me firm on my course, if you know what I mean. If I didn't have them, any sudden breeze might upset me. I heard my grandmother say that once upon a time all flies had four wings, but they found they didn't need them. After a while those wings, never used, grew smaller and smaller, until at last, in my generation, they have disappeared or turned into balancers. Things grow weak that are never used, so my grandmother said. There, I've told you all I know about my knobs. Are you satisfied?"

"Almost," said Peter, and tried desperately to think of something else to ask Mrs. Fly, keep her on his side all the longer.

Next: "Fly Finds Peter Out."

WHAT WILL THE MORROW BRING?

Bo-Broadway

By JOSEPH VAN RAALTE

NEW YORK. — Chain stores in Tammany Town, coyly venturing, some time ago, into the book business as a sideline, have now gone into the thing in a serious way. They have inaugurated what they call a Book-A-Month plan, specializing in new detective yarns at cut rates.

So that, when you enter one of these shops with a companion in quest, let us say, of a Hoyo de Hooy, and you turn to probe your friend's preference, he's just as likely to say: "Let me have an Edgar Wallace!"

TELLING THE WORLD

The other day, outside the Tuscany, I encountered Ted Saucier, Boswell of Park avenue. One of Ted's numerous jobs is to see that in the complex multiplicity of daily happenings in Tammany Town, the new Waldorf-Astoria Hotel, in course of construction, is not crowded out of public attention.

"Ted," said I, "you look like a great, big, happy sunflower."

"I am happy," he replied. "I have just learned that builders of the new Waldorf-Astoria Hotel have awarded contracts for 3,350 carloads of building material."

"Not, really?" said I.

"Yes," he continued, beaming. "Four hundred carloads of face brick, 1,100 carloads of common brick, 423 carloads of cement, 325 carloads of terra cotta partition block, and 50 carloads of 4-inch gypsum block."

"Ted," I cried.

"It's true," he said, his eyes flashing like an elk's tooth on the waistcoat of a travelling man.

"But I can hardly believe it, Ted!"

"I can tell you something more," he added, with suppressed excitement. "The 50 carloads of 4-inch gypsum block represent 320,000 square feet. The 325 carloads of terra cotta partition block, ranging in thickness from 2, 3, 4 and 6 inches, represent a total of 2,665,000 square feet of partition, or the equivalent of a wall 5 feet high by 102 miles long—which is 10 miles greater than the distance from New York to Philadelphia. Think of it!"

"I am trying to think of it," I told him, "but it staggers my imagination. Ted," I said, grasping his honest hand, "I rejoice with you in your joy. Accept my heartfelt felicitation in your hour of triumph."

"Ah," he murmured in a tremolo, "life has been kind to me."

And thus I left him, outside the Tuscany, his flashing smile rivaling the twinkling sunlight of the early June afternoon.

SOUND PHILOSOPHY

He's known simply as "Tony" and he operates a peddle-polishing parlor in a 42nd Street arcade—a weazened little Italian, seamy and stained, old and tired and weathly. He looks as if he had been born in his blue overalls and weather-stained cap.

He could buy and sell most of the men whose boots he polishes; and with this in mind, I said to him the other day, perched on one of the chairs of his stand:

"Why do you keep on working when you could quit and enjoy life? Why don't you get out somewhere under a rose-tree in the sun and bask and dream and chew on those wop stories of yours, and forget this disturbed ant heap?"

"You can't live forever and you can't take your dough with you when you start up The Golden Stairs."

He shrugged and bent lower over the recalcitrant tip of my left boot. And then, after perhaps a minute or so, he rehearsed the story, in his own way.

"I married an Irish girl, down on the lower East Side. That's a long time ago. You were just a baby then. We had a wedding dinner at Lyon's on the Bowery. Remember Lyon's place? It was a big party. And what do you think my wife ordered? She could have had anything she wanted—a steak, chicken, chops—but she asked for corned beef and cabbage."

Silence for awhile.

"She was a good girl. She's dead now. Five years I'm alone. I got three kids, all married, with troubles of their own. My oldest boy he's a lawyer in the Corporation Counsel's office. The second one, Angelo, he's a first grade police detective. The youngest, Joey, he's got a job in a bank."

"Why not? I shine 'em good don't I? That's something. And when you're shinin' shoes you ain't got time to be lonesome, missin' somebody."

Who's Who and Timely Views

By ADOLPH ZUKOR

President, Paramount Famous-Lasky Corporation

(Adolph Zukor was born at Rice, Hungary, Jan. 7, 1873. He was educated in Hungary and evening schools of New York City. In 1898 he came to the United States and engaged in the hardware, upholstery and fur business in New York and Chicago. In 1904 he became associated with Mitchell Mark, owner of the Strand theatre, New York, and Marcus Loew, presenting vaudeville and motion pictures. He founded the Famous Players Film company in 1912. He now is president of the Paramount Famous-Lasky corporation. His offices are in New York City.)

Good business throughout the country is reflected by the returns from more than 1,500 motion picture theaters.

In some parts of the country, notably Texas, Oklahoma and California, business, as reflected by the theaters, is abnormally good.

Our business corresponds favorably with last year's business, except that last year was above normal because of the novelty of the sound pictures. Eliminating last year's business, conditions in our industry are better this year than in any of the previous 10 years.

I see no reason for pessimism, and my conclusions, based on a nationwide survey of the motion picture industry by our company and other organizations, are that favorable conditions will continue.

We find no cause for complaint with our business in any part of the country.

We are in touch with business conditions in the smallest hamlet in the country. We have spread out throughout the United States 1,560 theaters. We not only feel no pessimism over the business situation, but can see nothing but good prospects.

Our organization is doing a satisfactory business in Europe with the exception of Germany, where the situation has been rendered difficult because of certain patent litigation. Efforts are being made to iron out these difficulties and if successful the situation in Germany will be favorable.

Watermelons Contain Needed Vitamins

Watermelons of the red fleshed variety are a good source of vitamin A, needed for growth and physical well being, tests by the bureau of home economics of the United States department of agriculture show. Watermelons are also well supplied with vitamin C, the food factor important in the nutrition of the teeth and some other parts of the body, the studies revealed. Vitamins A and C, also essential in stimulating growth and normal development, were shown to be present in watermelons in detectable quantities.

Eggs with Pimento Potatoes—Two cups hot diced potatoes, two pimentos finely minced, two tablespoons butter, one-third cup rich milk, one-half teaspoon salt, four eggs, paprika and salt. Mix the hot, diced potatoes and the very finely cut pimentos and add the butter, milk and salt. Beat until blended—about three minutes. Pile evenly in a buttered baking dish and make four hollows. Drop a raw egg in each of these depressions, dust with salt and paprika and bake in a moderate oven until the eggs are set. Garnish with parsley and serve. This will make four servings.

Eggs with Codfish

Whole Wheat Bread, Butter, Berries, Jam, Cake, Tea

Have you ever eaten codfish, eggs and potatoes cooked together in the fashion suggested here? Try it. The one dish simplifies the preparation of the meal and saves much work.

After a prolonged session of closed windows during the winter months, the kitchen walls are likely to be affected by the smoke, steam, and greasy particles that rise from food while it is being cooked.

Unless re-painting is necessary, washing is a good way to freshen the painted wall surfaces. A satisfactory preparation is made by mixing a quart of hot soapy water with a quart of boiling water in which two ounces of glue have been dissolved. The addition of a little flour, ammonia, and sal soda will make the solution thicker and stronger.

Apply this jellied compound to the walls with a soft sponge, working from the bottom up, then wipe it down with a clean cloth. Never attempt to clean spots or soiled patches. Unless you go over the entire surface, streaks and rings are likely to result.

Bread Pudding—Two cups bread, three cups milk, two eggs, one-half teaspoon nutmeg, one-fourth cup sugar, one-fourth teaspoon salt, one tablespoon butter. Beat eggs, add milk and broken bread. Add sugar, nutmeg and salt, then stir in melted butter. Bake until set, in pudding dish set in larger pan of water. Frost with meringue made from two egg whites (left from spinach sauce) and two tablespoons sugar. It requires twelve minutes to brown and set meringue. Before serving dot with currant jelly.

Merchants Accept Second Defeat Of Year

GRISMER COALS END WINNING STREAK OF XENIA TEAM SUNDAY

Sub Hurler Batters New Xenia Pitcher Here 6 To 2

Xenia Merchants, winners of their last six straight games, submitted to their second defeat of the current season and again it was the Grismer Coals of Dayton that turned the trick, this time by a more decisive margin of 6 to 2, Sunday afternoon at Washington Park.

Substituting for Harvey Reese, who was unexpectedly signed Sunday to pitch for the Richmond, Ind. team of the Central League, Grismer was given the hurling assignment for the Grismer Coals and did a neat job of it, holding the Merchants to nine well distributed hits. He only fanned two batters but the local nine found it difficult to hit him safely.

"Jug" Conley, former field captain, was back in the Merchants lineup at his old station at second base Sunday and contributed two hits, one a double which drove in a run.

A new pitcher named Heikey was on the firing line for the Merchants. He limited the Dayton nine to ten blows but wisdom got him into trouble.

Sunday's game inaugurated a three-game series with the Grismer Coals, the only team which has been able to beat the Merchants this year. A few weeks ago with Harvey Reese on the mound, the Grismer nine outlasted the Merchants in a fifteen-inning debate to win out, 8 to 7.

The Grismer team opened with a three-run rally in the first inning of the series opener Sunday. Hoefler walked. A Eckert sacrificed and White walked. Eckinger was safe on an error by Ruse. Then came successive singles by E. Eckert, B. Fisher and Brown and three runs were in.

Home runs were responsible for the next two Dayton markers. E. Eckert slammed one for all the bases in the fifth and Brown connected for a circuit blow in the seventh. In each case the bases were empty at the time. A single by Eckinger and a triple by B. Fisher produced the final Dayton tally in the ninth.

A single by Weller, followed by two straight errors gave the Merchants their first run in the fifth stanza. Their second and last run came in the eighth on singles by Ruse and Moore and a double by Conley.

Harvey Reese, regular pitcher for the Grismer Coals, has been hanging around Dayton all season but the Dayton Aviators of the Central League could not use him. Sunday morning he was signed up by Richmond and pitched against the Aviators in the second half of a double-header. He won his game, 4 to 1 in seven innings and did not allow a hit in the first six rounds during which eighteen batters faced him and were retired in order.

Merchants and Grismer Coals will face each other again next Sunday on the local diamond. Lineups:

NO. 2—COURT PLAY

WATCHING a stirring title tennis match, creates the impression that there is a definite meaning and object back of everything the players do. Each of the various strokes are used at the proper time and court tactics and manipulation of the opponent's position is like a game of chess or checkers. We are sensing the real secret of the game of tennis. So if there are any secrets, we want to find them out and use them ourselves.

The meaning of court play is the functioning of each department of the game: court technique and strategy, position, stroke equipment, foot work and physical effort, all controlled by the mind and ability of the player.

The object of court play is to use each of these functions to manipulate your opponent into a position where he falls to win the point you are after. The successful use of court play is determined by the quality and calibre of your tennis equipment and your ability to adjust yourself to meet the needs of each situation.

Fix this fundamental idea in mind: 1. Each shot or series of shots makes a point. 2. Each point or series of points makes a game. 3. Each game or series of games makes a set. 4. Each set or series of sets makes a match.

Concentrate, therefore, on each shot, and let the game and match take care of itself. Learn where each ball should go and why; carefully build up the necessary stroke machine to make it go there and, above all, CONCENTRATE.

OSBORN TEAM LOSES TO SPRINGFIELD IN TOURNAMENT GAME

Legion Junior Champs Of Greene County Are Eliminated

The "526 Specials," the junior baseball team representing the Osborn-Fairfield post of the American Legion, was eliminated by Springfield's champion junior Legion nine, 7 to 1 in a game limited to five innings on the Osborn diamond Sunday afternoon.

The Osborn-Fairfield nine, champions of Greene County, found it self outclassed and utterly at a loss to solve the puzzling delivery of Alvin Fenton, Springfield hurler, who granted only three hits. Kelly pitched for the losers and was hit safely eight times.

A triple by Nicewaner, first batter for Springfield in the opening inning, gave him the first pitched ball, gave him a hint of what was to come and from then on the ultimate result was never in doubt. The Springfield players experimented with their bunting game in two of the five stanzas, each batter being instructed to "lay it down" regardless of the number out or the position of runners on base, and the Osborn youths were helpless to cope with this form of attack.

In addition to collecting three of his team's eight hits, Chip Snyder, third baseman, did some expert fielding for the winners. The fielding feat was Setty's relay from right field that cut a runner off at third base.

The Springfield team, which had previously beaten the Urbana juniors the week before, gives promise of being the most formidable team that has represented the Reaper City in the junior tournament for many years and has now earned the right to play the Dayton champion for the district title. Score by innings:

Springfield	2	0	2	7	8	1
Osborn	0	0	0	1	0	1

Batteries: Springfield: Fenton and Priest; Osborn: Kelly and Kneisley.

ALLEGED PAROLE VIOLATOR IS HELD

Charged with being a parole violator, Wilbur Baker, 32, colored, 509 E. Main St., was arrested by Xenia police Sunday for Sheriff Harvey Russell of Auglaize County and will be removed to Wapakonee for prosecution.

Baker was arrested by local police March 29 and turned over to Auglaize County authorities, who prosecuted him on a charge of burglary for breaking into a slaughter house owned by A. W. Boecker at Wapakonee. Local police records disclose that Baker was found not guilty of a manslaughter charge here in 1927 and that in 1927 he was arrested on a worthless check charge but escaped prosecution when he made the check good.

POPULATION LOSS SHOWN IN TOWNSHIP

Decrease of forty-four in the population of Caesarcreek Twp., within the last ten years is noted in figures released Monday by Wilbur H. Story, Springfield, district census supervisor. The 1930 population of the township is 838 as compared with 882 in 1920 when the last count was made. There were 144 farms enumerated in this area and only three persons out of employment, a survey showed.

HAGEN TO SPEAK

Walter Hagen, golfer, will pause on the eve of his fight for the U. S. open championship on the Interlachen course at Minneapolis Wednesday night at 9:30 o'clock. E. S. T., and give a preliminary survey of the tournament over the NBC chain. Hagen will talk with Grantland Rice on the Coca Cola hour.

VANDALIA BANK YIELDS $3,000

DAYTON, O., July 7.—Three bandits robbed the Vandalia State Bank, at Vandalia, about nine miles north of here, this afternoon, and escaped with $3,000, or more.

One of the highwaymen remained in a auto outside the bank while his two companions entered the bank shortly afterwards and held up the cashier, Robert Johnson, who was alone in the bank.

As the bandits dashed out of the building John Ginn, a local resident, fired at them. Ginn is believed to have hit one of the robbers.

Leaping into their car, the bandits headed toward the west, followed by a posse of Vandalia citizens.

MUNICIPAL COURT

Accused of disorderly conduct for allegedly starting a fight on Miller Ave., one day last week, Virgil Kersey, 20, Miller Ave., pleaded guilty, was fined $5 and costs and committed to the County Jail by Municipal Judge E. Dawson Smith in default of payment Monday.

N. Y. STOCK MARKET

NEW YORK, July 7.—Stock prices sagged sharply in the first half of today's session, and a long list of speculative favorites was hammered into new low ground for the year.

There was a heavy accumulation of over the week-end selling orders, influenced by the depressed state of affairs in the steel and automobile industries, and professional bears were quick to take advantage of the early settlement to launch a concentrated selling attack all along the line.

United States Steel was forced down to 15 1/4 for a loss of 3 1/2 points. General Electric was hammered down to 65 1/4 for a loss of almost 2 points; Westinghouse dipped down some 3 points to 131 1/4. Radio dropped 1 1/2 to 33 1/4; and American Coal a loss of 2 1/2 points at 114 1/4.

The utility group was swept sharply lower as bearish forces once more emphasized the high ratio of earnings to market price for members of this list. North American slumped 5 points to 89.

3 1/2. Consolidated has reached 2 1/4 to 103 1/4; American Waterworks sold off 3 1/4 to 80, and Electric Power and Light was off 3 1/4 at 64 1/4.

Higher priced specialties tumbled down in precipitate manner. Air Education continuing its wide break of last Thursday made a new low at 11 1/4, a further loss of 5 points, Case Threshing cracked 9 points to 160 1/4, and DuPont sold at a new low at 98, a loss of more than 2 points.

Oils, motors, and coppers sold off sympathetically, but declines in these divisions were not of undue proportions.

Commodity markets continued unsettled with July wheat falling off 1 1/4 to 88 1/4 cents. Cotton futures were lower.

DAD'S GIRL

EDNA ROBB WEBSTER

THE STORY OF A GIRL WHO DESERVED TO WIN

CHAPTER 43

"I do like everything." As she said the words, though, Clara Dee remembered a little disgustedly the enormous amount of food she had once scornfully turned up her sophisticated little nose at imported delicacies: alligator pears, artichokes, caviar, sweet breads, mushrooms. Her appetite for food, as for amusements, experiences, places, had been so jaded that nothing had interested her, however tempting it was.

She helped with the dishes and took a car back downtown; decided she wouldn't mind a fifteen minute ride on the street car; anyway, she would endure it whether she liked it or not. That was part of her training in this new school of experience.

She checked out at the Statler next morning, had her trunk and bags sent to the apartment and went home with Margaret at five o'clock. She was presented with her half of the dresser space, clothespress and writing desk, and after having a delicious dinner of Margaret's cooking and washing the dishes, spent a pleasant evening arranging her possessions in the new home. It did seem like home more than her father's had ever been to her.

But she was now working to pay the rent and buy the food. And home is the place we cherish and labor to provide for, and maintain with our own efforts. Her share of this comfort and shelter and sustenance depended upon her own assiduity, for which she received money to pay for it. Why! she would have to take her very clothes out of these drawers if she failed to earn the money to pay her share of the rent. Yes, she appreciated this home.

In a way, it reminded her of the room at boarding school which she had shared with Bee, except where as she had had two dressing tables, two desks, two beds, she and Margaret had only one of these together. And had never given a thought to the source of the money which paid for it, except to endorse her father's check.

Margaret cast an admiring glance at her toilet articles. "What a beautiful toilet set! They put mine to shame," she exclaimed, though not jealously.

"It is pretty, isn't it? This was my father's. She lent out the photograph to her."

"A splendid looking man," Margaret observed. "I don't even remember my parents," wistfully.

"I never knew mine very well," Clara Dee confessed. "You see, mother died when I was only a child, and I was away at school most of the time until before Dad's death."

"Oh," being unable to comprehend why this girl should be here if her father had possessed the means to keep her in private schools. But she made no attempt to pry into her past; she liked her, believed that they would get along well together, and would accept only such confidences as Clara Dee volunteered to make.

"I hope that you will not decide you are going to be too lonely here with me. I haven't many friends. I've somehow always been too busy to go out. And I'm a little choosy about making friends."

"Which suits me fine," she fervently hoped that her past would not follow her here, and seek her out in her secluded happiness and comfort. She wondered, guiltily, what Madge—who was choosy with her friends—would say or do, if she knew that her roommate was a murderer at large, in the eyes of the law; that for almost a month her home had been a prison cell; she shuddered inwardly. And resolved that no one should know from her, that she would live proudly, independently. Knew that she was imposing no injustice upon Madge—for she was innocent. And that from beginning, and to that end, she would live her life for herself. "I shan't have much time for pleasure if I'm going to learn to cook; and I intend to work very hard at the office to justify the faith Mr. Randall has in my ability."

"You will like him. Everyone does. On the whole, there is a pretty good bunch down there, but you'll soon learn which ones to avoid. You see, it's the first and only place I've ever worked, so I can't compare it with others."

"How did you happen to come to St. Louis?" Clara Dee ventured. It was not her habit to ask personal questions, but she couldn't connect Margaret's presence here with her story of Aunt Jen's farm in Iowa.

"Well you see, I'd always wanted very much to work in an office, so Uncle Tom promised me that if I would help Aunt Jen with the children through the year, after I finished high school, he would send me to business college. I expected to find work in some town near there, but Don Evans, one of our neighbors, knew Mr. Randall and suggested that I might get a better position through him; so, of course, coming farther away to a big city appealed to me. I haven't found it much different from any other place, but I've liked my work. By the way, you should meet Don Evans. He's different from most of the other fellows in his community. Has all the girls crazy about him, but never seems to care for any of them. Everyone thought he'd come home from college engaged, but he didn't."

"Where did he go to college?"

"At the State Agricultural college at Ames. His father died before he had his farm paid for and Don was the oldest of four children. He worked night and day and finished high school and his mother kept things going while he was away, with the help of the younger children. When he came home, he mortgaged the farm again to drain some of the low land and fertilize some clay land that had never produced a crop, turned the whole place into a truck farm, built a market house on the road in front of the place and sent vegetables and fruit by truck to Omaha, across the river, three times a week. All the neighbors declared he had started something he couldn't finish with his 'new fangled' notions, but he has the best and most modern farm in the community now, and everyone who lives on a main highway now sells his produce on the road; but no one has the reputation nor markets Don Evans has. And he has market stalls in every city around."

"That must be interesting—to grow fresh, nourishing food for hundreds of families. Is this Don a friend worth having?"

"He is, and I hope you may meet him some day. Yes, we are good friends, but nothing more. He would probably open his eyes if he saw you, though."

"Oh, I'm not interested in any man," Clara Dee hastened to reply. "Life is far too busy and interesting to waste upon men except in impersonal acquaintance."

Margaret laughed. "Oh, come now, I hope you are not a man hater. I like men—that is, some men," she declared. "I admire men with ambitions and good principles."

"Yes, good men are essential in business, but quite superfluous as friends, so far as I am concerned."

And the most difficult problem connected with Clara Dee's new position, proved to be the attentions she received from the opposite sex. Which was not strange, considering her fresh, glowing beauty, attractive manners and excellent choice of clothes. But she declared to herself that she would be perfectly happy if men would leave her strictly alone, except for business interviews. Whenever a vision of a boyish brown head and sparkling eyes, the remembrance of a strong hand upon hers, or a touch of fingers that seemed to scorch her flesh entered her consciousness, Clara Dee resolutely put them from her.

Now why didn't they follow Margaret about instead of her? True, she was not beautiful, but the beauty of her character and soul was far more attractive than the physical charms of many. And Margaret wanted the attention of men; Clara Dee had observed that she responded eagerly to the slightest advance. The admirers whom Clara Dee found most difficult to manage, were several of the salesmen with whom she came constantly in contact. Some of the company's own representatives as well as those of other firms. Jarvis McKinney, from Chicago, was most persistent. She was positive that had she been interested in having masculine friends at all, she would not have chosen McKinney. First and worst, he was inclined to stoutness, and she despised stout men. He was bland and profusely complimentary and, Clara Dee judged, would turn his headling anywhere at the mere suggestion of a pre-prohibition treat.

But she met his supposedly clever sallies, humored him with friendly chats, tolerated him for the sake of business, and secretly hoped that he would soon lose the position which necessitated his call at the office. She wisely concluded that it would be very foolish in her to consider another position because of the several men whom she disliked. She would always find some of that kind everywhere. So long as she could respect and enjoy working for Mr. Randall, she considered herself fortunate. And she observed that men of his caliber were in the majority as big bosses—the unscrupulous, insidious, petty ones, only obtained the important positions through a "pull" or by inheritance, and then, very often, could not hold them.

A month passed. In her mail was a forwarded letter which had first gone to Mrs. Flynn's. The address was typed, and in the upper left hand corner was a printed address: Mercy Hospital, Minnerville, Mo.

Who could possibly be writing her from a hospital out here, wondered Clara Dee. But, of course, she only was so far as I am concerned."

Yet she didn't immediately. Some how she dreaded what that envelope would disclose. Call it premonition, superstition or absurdity. Had she guessed the significance of its contents upon her whole future life, she would have ripped the envelope from its message and hugged it to her heart. But, of course, she couldn't know. And, even after she had read the message, she didn't know.

The Theater

Having served a long apprenticeship as an ingenue, Anita Page is in line for her first big lead in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's film version of "War Nurse."

The novel, by Rebecca West, ran in serial form in Cosmopolitan Magazine and attracted wide attention. It drew a picture of the World War from the viewpoint of a woman serving in the hospitals. The role of Corinne Andrews, heroine of "War Nurse" demands a maturity of characterization such as Miss Page has never been called upon to portray. She is said to be the only person under serious consideration for the part. Edgar Selwyn, the Broadway producer, will direct the picture.

"Her Wedding Night," an operetta which was to have featured Jeanette MacDonald and Robert Chisholm, the Broadway singer, has been postponed by Paramount. The studio explains that Chisholm was called back to Broadway but it is freely rumored that the increasing dislike for musical pictures is the real reason for the change in plans. The aversion to the musicals is said to be growing more pronounced and the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer musical department is stripped down to a shadow of its former self.

But in spite of the fact that the talkie musicals are falling into disrepute, this studio will start work immediately on "Daybreak," a musical with a score written by Johann Strauss, famous Viennese composer, which will feature Ramon Novarro.

The story is being adapted from a novel by Arthur Schnitzler. Because Strauss was composer of "The Chocolate Soldier," the new operetta is rated as an important piece of work. Novarro has just returned to Hollywood from Lansing, Mich., where he studied for a month under his voice teacher, Louise Gravure.

A deadlock between Janet Gaynor and the Fox Company is keeping that young lady out of pictures. It is reported that Janet hasn't

The First Law Of Nature

SELF PRESERVATION is the first law of nature. This principle is inherent in all forms of life, from the vegetable to the animal kingdom. It is the story of the plant that turns to the light when placed in a dark room. It is the story of the tabby-cat that mothers its kittens. It is the story of mankind from the first pages of written history.

SELF PRESERVATION is as necessary in Community Welfare as in any form of life. Without this principle, our very system of government would be torn asunder by misguided persons who constantly seek something new. Without this principle, nations would be overrun by greedy invaders. Without this principle local prosperity can be undermined by outside interests whose first law is to Take and never Give.

COMMON SENSE AND GOOD JUDGMENT tell us to protect our own interests, for if we do not, who will? What can we expect from the Chain Store that takes our money and sends it away to its Home office in some distant City?

WE ALL KNOW THAT THE CHAIN STORE does not pay taxes to educate our children, maintain our streets or our fire department. It does not pay for the building of our churches and the maintenance of our social and religious institutions. Somebody has to pay for all these things out of money made in Xenia. Money taken out of Xenia can never be brought back to help us in time of dire need.

EVERY DOLLAR SPENT WITH YOUR LOCAL MERCHANT MEANS added wealth, added real estate values, added prosperity and added facilities of all kinds, while every dollar spent out of town through the Chain Store medium means more unfair competition for our local merchants, and less taxes for the support of the Community.

TO ENFORCE THE FIRST LAW OF NATURE AND PROVIDE for the preservation of local interests, spend your money where you know it will be good for Xenia. Patronize your Independent Merchant and keep your money at home.
